CLASSES RESUME

A hot and humid Sept. 11th saw the beginning of the ninety-eighth academic year of the Philadelphia Seminary. The Middlers and Seniors, arriving over the weekend, joined the entering students. Two absences were noted. Dr. Edmund Steimle, Hagan Professor of Practical Theology, is now Professor of Homiletics at Union Theological Seminary in New York. Before leaving Philadelphia, however, Dr. Steimle consented to contribute occasionally to The Seminarian articles expressing his view of the life and thought of the Church from his new perspective. These will be printed as they arrive. Absent also from her post is Miss Margaret Ost, long-time figure in the Seminary office. Miss Ost has moved to Denver for a much-needed and deserved rest. Our prayers and best wishes go with her.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO SEMINARIAN

Whether a regular member of the Seminarian staff or not, any student may submit articles, letters, poetry, etc., for publication. These may be left in the Seminarian mailbox or given to one of the editors. The editors reserve the right to select the material to be printed, to edit and correct where necessary, and to retain original manuscripts. Consultation with authors of articles may be called before printing. Anonymous contributions will not be printed, but an author may request that his name be withheld, and it will not be released without his permission.

STAFF MEETING

Those interested in writing for the Seminarian will meet in E-51 on Thursday, 14 Sept., at 4 p.m.

NUPTIAL NEWS

"Wedding Bells are Breaking up that Old Gang of Mine" seemed to be a favorite theme song as the upperclassmen began arriving back at Mt. Airy over the weekend. Shiny new gold and silver wedding bands announced to all that the number of bachelors remaining in the senior and middle classes was rapidly diminishing.

Meals at the refectory, the telephone number of Iankenau School of Nursing, and evenings out with the boys, had been exchanged for home cooking, shopping lists for the weekly visits to the A & P, and "real" companionship. The staff of The Seminarian extends to all these men and their mates best wishes and many happy years of married life.

The members of the senior class who were married this summer were Charles Confer, Guy Edmiston, Bob Hughes, Phil Jurus (intern), Bob Meschke (intern), Charles Seivard, Lou Smith, Fred Wietfeldt, John Hayner, and Stanley Phillips.

Jack Elstad, Don Jacobs, Dave Krewson, Malcom Lerch, Herb Mohlenhoff, Priit Rebano, and Dick Zimmerman are the Middlers for whom the bells told.

RE: EDWARD POST

Upperclassmen will be glad to know that Ed Post has recuperated from his illness and entered Southern Seminary. A graduate of Wagner College and member of the class of '63, last year Ed was taken ill, and this forced him to leave Mt. Airy in early spring. His transfer to Southern Seminary was prompted by an asthmatic condition which he hopes will be alleviated by the southern climate. Any correspondence may be addressed to him in care of Southern Lutheran Seminary, Columbia, South Carolina.
